Wearable Resistance @ Studio XX, Montreal, Canada (2009)

Miniatures Détail Commentaires

Exploring the body as billboard, De Geuzen hosted a skillshare at Studio XX. Together with the participants, we collaboratively brainstormed and played with a mix of electronics and traditional handicraft. Armed with curiosity, secondhand clothing, LEDs, electronic gear, scissors and glue, we made a variety of prototypes.

keywords: slogans, smart textiles, handicraft, low-tech, high-tech, do-it-yourself, LED, talk without speaking, body as billboard, Hester Prynne, prototyping, sandwich boards...

A very big thanks to all the hard working folks at Studio XX and Artistic, who invited us to organize this workshop and provided us with technical and logistical support.

This workshop gave us the opportunity to work with an amazing bunch of people who were loaded with skills to swap. We were taught a variety of useful things from how to wire electricity to how to felt wool. We could not have asked for more wonderful people to share skills with. And the food and chatter we shared together was simply delightful.
